LOBSTER LORE

- Lobsters were once considered the poor man's chicken. In Colonial times, they were fed to pigs and goats and only eaten by paupers.
- Lobsters aren't red. They turn red when cooked, but in nature they can be green or yellow or even bright blue.
- Lobstermen throw back lobsters that are too small, or too big. The small ones need to grow; the large ones add vigor to the gene pool.
 - A female lobster can only mate just after she has molted.
- Lobsters can swim forward and backward. When they're alarmed, they scoot away in reverse by rapidly curling and uncurling their tails.
- Because its nervous system is similar to that of grasshoppers and ants, lobsters are sometimes called "bugs."
 - When food is scarce, lobsters can turn cannibal and dine on smaller lobsters.
- Lobsters reproduce by laying lobster eggs. The eggs are carried by the female until they're ready to hatch.
 - Lobster eggs are called roe, just like fish eggs.
- Slaves sometimes dined like kings, often eating lobster because it was plentiful and cheap.
- Maine lobsters are clawed lobsters, and have large, meaty claws.
- Lobsters are usually caught in an underwater trap called a 'lobster pot', baited with dead fish.
- Lobsters can grow up to four feet long and weigh as much as 40 lbs!
 - It is believed that lobsters can live as long as 100 years.
- Lobsters have a crusher claw and a pincer claw; some lobsters have the crusher claw on the right side and others have it on the left.
- Native Americans ate lobsters after wrapping them in seaweed and baking them over hot rocks.
- Native Americans also used lobster as bait and to fertilize crops.
 - Lobster meat provides up to 28 grams of protein per cup.
- Lobsters are a great source of heart-healthy omega-3 fatty acids.
- Lobsters were once so plentiful that after a storm they would wash ashore in deep piles.
- Lobsters were originally gathered by hand. It wasn't until the mid-19th century that lobster trapping became popular.
- A soft-shelled lobster (shedder) is one that has just molted and is in a growing phase. It is considered to have sweeter, more tender meat.
 - A lobster will, quite literally, drown in fresh water.
 - Lobsters have teeth in their stomachs.
- It's a myth that lobsters scream when you put them in hot water - they have no lungs and no vocal cords.
- Lobstermen swear a lot! Nearly as much as our kitchen staff!
